FATHER'S COLUMN

Jesus answered them,
"The hour has come for the Son of Man to be glorified."

How much some athletes, rock and movie stars, politicians, even ourselves sacrifice to achieve glorification that is, in the end, short-lived. This sacrifice and glorification is self-serving. Jesus invites another kind of sacrifice and glorification that ultimately is also "self-serving," but in another way.

Jesus teaches us that what leads to glorification is dying to self, losing our lives, serving him and others. He has shown us the way by being "lifted up from the earth." Unlike the self-serving and short-lived glorification fabricated by human beings, the glorification Jesus promises is "eternal life" given by God. Seeking this glorification is "self-serving" in a good way: we become who God created and intends us to be.

Opportunities for dying to self, losing life for the sake of others, and serving Jesus in others are abundant; we need only to see them and respond. For example, parents giving time and energy to help their children grow; employees speaking the truth even when there is personal cost; neighbors responding to the needs of the poor. The glorification we receive for being other-centered is given to us even now in the joy that comes from deepened relationships, from seeing the relief and gratitude of others, from our own satisfaction for having acted like Jesus. In such faithful discipleship, we grow toward the ultimate glorification of eternal Life.
