FATHER'S COLUMN

Simon Peter and the other disciple did not yet understand the Scripture that he had to rise from the dead.

Peter and the Beloved Disciple race to the tomb and once they arrive, find it empty except for the burial cloths. These symbols of death lie in the tomb but the body they swaddled is nowhere to be found. These mysterious happenings hint that the story of Jesus' life is not over, but the disciples "do not yet understand the Scripture, that he had to rise from the dead."

Yes, the Christian life defies logic. An infant refugee is the King of Kings. A lamb redeems the sheep. Life overtakes death. Yet this glorious celebration of the paschal feast is this paradox. Christ, the crucified One, has broken down the bars of death and the bonds of sin.

It's true that the disciples had not understood the Scriptures yet, in order to believe that Christ had risen from the dead. But, if we believe in Christ, then we believe that in him all things can be transformed. We and all the world, sinful and broken, are alive, are loved, and can be changed.

Today we gather with cries of "Alleluia, he is risen!" But the question remains for us, do we, even now, nearly two thousand years after the event, understand the rising from the dead?

Surely, it defies understanding. How can one who has been confirmed dead and lain within a tomb for three days be "raised"? How can life return stronger than death? And yet, we are resurrection people, called to proclaim the death and resurrection of Christ in our words, actions, and very being. If we truly believe in this bold event, it changes everything. So, how do we celebrate? Did the preparation of the Lenten journey bring us through suffering and sadness to remain the same? Or are we changed, too, bound as we are to his paschal mystery through our baptism? How are we newly alive? How are we more fully the merciful love of Christ? How can our lives truly proclaim, "Alleluia, he is risen!"?
